This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. PREFACE.

In the compilation of this work every effort has been made to procure full and accurate information from all parts of the State, and the publisher takes pleasure in presenting the result of those efforts for the patronage of a generous public, trusting that they will overlook any imperfection it may contain, and give full credit for the amount of information afforded.

It is believed that an impartial examination will satisfy any one as to its general correctness and utility.

The thanks of the publisher are due to Postmasters, newspaper publishers, and others who have kindly aided him in the undertaking.

An apology to the patrons of the work may seem necessary for the apparently unnecessary delay in its publication, which has been occasioned by many difficulties in addition to those usually experienced in the preparation of a work of this kind—among which were obtaining competent assistants in compiling the work, and the delay in making satisfactory arrangements for and in the execution of the printing. Notwithstanding these and other disadvantages under which the work has been done, we are confident that the GAZETTEER OF MICHIGAN for 1867–8 will be found as accurate and complete as any work of the kind ever published in the State. In point of excellence in the execution of the mechanical part of the work, we challenge comparison with any similar work in the country.

Confidently believing in the correctness and completeness of our book as a Business Directory, and as a reliable reference in regard to the material facts touching the history, growth and prosperity of Michigan, we offer it to a discriminating public for approval.

MICHIGAN.

THE State of Michigan is separated from Canada on the north and east by Lakes Superior, Huron, St. Clair and Erie, and by the rivers or straits of Detroit and St. Clair; from Illinois and Wisconsin on the west, by Lake Michigan and the Menomonee river, while on the south it borders on the States of Ohio and Indiana. It lies latitudinally between 41°45′ and 48° north, and longitudinally between 82° 29′ and 90° 34′ west. That portion of the State lying east of Lake Michigan is known as the Southern Peninsula. That portion lying between Lake Michigan and Lake Superior, and whose eastern limit is Drummond Isle, is known as the Northern Peninsula. It is one of the five States carved out of the magnificent country known as the Northwestern Territory in the celebrated ordinance of 1787. It contains an area of 56,243 square miles of land, and the area of its waters is nearly three-fourths as great.

The word Michigan is said to be derived from two words in the Chippewa language, signifying "great lake," and as applied to the peninsulas, which constitute the State, signify "the land or the country of the great lakes." To the most casual observer of the geographical construction of this section of the country the name is strikingly appropriate. Its shores are washed by every lake in the "great chain," excepting Ontario, and it has not a county but is studded, more or less thickly, with beautiful lakelets, from one to twenty miles in circumference. The Aztec, or ancient Mexican language, had a word signifying the "land of the great lakes," and it is supposed that the true interpretation of the word Aztecs, or Aztekas, is "the people of the land of the great lakes." It was the opinion of Humboldt that the land of the Aztecs was north of the 42d degree of latitude, and abundant evidences of a civilization far in advance of the native Indian are found in the antiquities of the State of Michigan. These evidences consist of ancient mounds, forts, and remains of ancient gardens, which are found in greater or less abundance in all parts of the State, but more especially on the banks of the large rivers, and frequently contain human bones, arrow heads, pieces of brass and iron, and in rare instances brazen vessels. Some of the most remarkable of these mounds have been found in Branch and Lenawee counties. Their great antiquity is established by the growth upon them of huge trees at least five hundred years old. Forts are more rare, and are of small dimensions compared with those of more modern times. They are found principally upon the Detroit, Huron and Raisin rivers, and upon Lake Erie, but occur occasionally in various parts of the State. Some of these are built in a semi-circular shape, and others elliptical, while many are square and others are rectangular, and still others irregular, all crude, yet all bearing evidence of a knowledge of of some of the principles of modern engineering. The ancient "garden beds" are found generally in the rich prairies and oak openings of the southern portion of the lower peninusula, and many of them are in an excellent state of preservation. One of the most remarkable of these is found a short distance from the village of Three Rivers, in St. Joseph county. It is a half a mile in length and a third of a mile in breadth, containing upwards of one hundred acres of land, regularly laid out in beds running north and south in the form of parallelograms, five feet wide, one hundred feet long, and eighteen inches deep, with alleys between them one and a half feet wide and one and a half feet deep. At the extremity of each is a semicircular bed of the same depth, and of a diameter corresponding to the width of the beds. These beds are said to be as distinctly discernible as if but recently made.

There are also evidences to prove conclusively that the iron and copper mines of the Northern Peninsula were worked by this ancient people. In the spring of 1848 Mr. Samuel Knapp, the agent of the Minnesota Mining Company, found eighteen feet below the surface a mass of native copper ten feet long by three feet wide, and two feet thick, resting on billets of oak supported by sleepers of the same wood. The ancient miners had from some cause abandoned their work before its completion. Numerous stone hammers and wedges were found in the vicinity, and also traces of fire and pieces of charcoal, showing that heat had been made use of to overcome the adhesion of the metals. Equally convincing evidences exist in other localities of the mining districts of the Northern Peninsula, and in rare instances metallic implements have been found, such as knives, hammers, &c. The great antiquity of these mining operations, like that of the gardens, mounds, and forts of the Southern Peninsula, is established by the growth of huge trees above them, by the fact that the native Indian was entirely ignorant of the existence of the mines until his attention was called to them by the white man, and by the equally undeniable fact that the herculean labors of the ancient miners were entirely inconsistent with the indolent habits of the Indian.

That the State of Michigan was many centuries ago inhabited by a people far superior to that which the European found occupying it, is beyond a question; but whether that people was identical with the ancient Aztecs is a problem which the antiquarian may never solve.

The foot of the European trod the soil of Michigan as early as 1610. In this regard she antedates Plymouth Rock, and the Old Dominion itself is only three years in advance of her. The ubiquitous and irrepressible Jesuit is never behind-hand, and it must be confessed that much of the pioneering, in the early history of civilization the world over, is closely identified with his religious enthusiasm. In this and the lucrativeness of the fur trade, we find the key to the early foothold obtained by the white man in this State. Father Sagard, a Frenchman, found the shores of Lake Huron in 1622, only seven years subsequent to the settlement of Quebec. And soon after 1650 trading posts were established at Sault de Ste. Marie, Michillimacinac, and Green Bay. The fur trade was very profitable. An instance is recorded where two thousand dollars' worth of trinkets, distributed to the Indians, brought the handsome return of thirty-four thousand dollars' worth of furs. And this was probably not an exceptional case. The consequence was a rivalry between the English and French to secure the favor of the Indians. In this the French were for some reason far more successful than the English, and to secure a monopoly of this trade they occupied and fortified the present site of Detroit, as the key to the great northern lakes, in the year 1701. This place had long been the site of an Indian village, and when first visited by the French was called Teuch-sa-Grondie. Game was abundant in this vicinity, and herds of buffalo ranged over the prairies and valleys. This, together with the natural attractiveness of the locality, is supposed to account for its being selected as the location of their village.

From the year 1710, to the year 1813, when Gen. Cass was appointed governor, the history of Detroit is the history of Michigan. At all events but very little was known of other portions of the State. And perhaps no city in America has known more of the vicissitudes of war and the instabilities of military rule than Detroit. What with the rivalries and contentions and intrigues of the French and English in their scrambles after the control of the fur trade, and the jealousies, treacheries and cruelties of the various Indian tribes, it was hardly ever at peace. Nearly all the Indian tribes sided with the French, but the Foxes or Otogamies refused to be conciliated and remained their deadly enemies to the bitter end. In 1712 they made an attack upon Detroit, and but for a timely discovery of their plans would have captured it. Fortunately they were held at bay and finally driven from their intrenchments to the shores of Lake St. Clair, where they were ignominiously defeated, with a loss of one thousand warriors.

In 1760 the fortunes of war gave Detroit to England, but the Indian allies of the French refused to acquiesce in the decision of the sword. Their deadly hatred of the English could not accomodate itself to the decisions of civilized warfare. It was at this period that Pontiac, the celebrated Ottawa chief, became conspicuous. He appears to have been a person of great personal courage and bravery, and great breadth of conception, but willing to compass his ends by treachery, falsehood, and meanness if need be. He had great influence with most of the Indian tribes, and organized them as a unit against the English, whom he hated with a deadliness that nothing could mollify. He conceived the magnificent project of driving the English beyond the Alleghanies, and so nearly succeeded that in a simultaneous attack upon their twelve principal forts, they all but three, Niagara, Pittsburg and Detroit, fell into his hands. He continued for several years to annoy the English in various ways, and when finally a treaty of peace was concluded with the various tribes, he refused to have any part in it, and betook himself to Illinois, where he afterwards fell by the hand of a Peoria Indian.

From this time the English, by adopting politic measures with the Indian tribes, seem to have attached them warmly to their interests. And during the American Revolution, Detroit seems to have remained profoundly loyal to the British cause, organizing and sending out several expeditions against the Americans, and sending out bands of Indian marauders, who perpetrated deeds of fiendish cruelty upon the unoffending frontier settlements. Even after the war, when by treaty stipulations all military posts south of the lakes were to be surrendered, the British, for several years, found various pretexts for retaining possession of Detroit, and it was not till 1796 that it was yielded up, when Capt. Porter entered it and took possession. From this time it was recognized as a part of the North-west territory over which the benificent provisions of the ordinance of 1787 extended.

In 1795 a project was started which, if it had proved successful would have materially affected the interests of the State of Michigan and modified her destiny. One Robert Randall, of Pennsylvania, and Charles Whiting, of Vermont, sought to obtain from the United States, the preemption right of the greater portion of the lower Peninsula or some twenty million acres of land. To effect this, they had entered into an agreement with several fur traders of Detroit, and had endeavored to enlist several members of Congress in their views. This tract was to be divided into forty-one equal shares, twenty-four of which were to be given to those members of Congress who should assist in effecting the requisite legislation. The sum proposed to be paid for this pre emption right was from half a million to a million dollars. Messrs. Randall and Whiting were promptly taken into the custody of the House, for "an unwarrantable attempt to corrupt the integrity of its members." They were examined and Whiting was discharged, but Randall was reprimanded by the speaker and obliged to pay the costs that accrued in the case. Thus terminated the project, but it is to be feared that Congress is not always as keenly alive to the interests of our territories, or to the thwarting of selfish schemes for individual aggrandizement.

The territorial organization of Michigan took place in 1805, and Gen. William Hull was appointed its first governor. On the 11th day of June, of the same year, Detroit was entirely consumed by fire.

In 1812, Congress declared war against Great Britain. The first shock fell upon Michigan. By the ignominious capitulation of Gen. Hull, Detroit was again surrendered into the hands of the British. With a force of 1,800 opposed by only 1,400, under Gen.

Brock, he surrendered without resistance, to the bitter mortification and indignation of his own troops. Though more than half a century has elapsed since then, the American people have not ceased to execrate that ignoble act, but all are not agreed as to whether his offence was that of cowardice or treason. It was followed by the renewal of Indian hostilities; deeds of wanton and murderous cruelty were again perpetrated by our savage foe, instigated by the scarcely less savage Briton. On the 22d of January, 1813, occurred the Battle of Frenchtown, or the "Massacre at the River Raisin," with the sickening details of which we presume most of our readers are acquainted. How bravely Winchester, with his 1,000 men, resisted Proctor, with his 2,000 soldiers and savages, how he ultimately surrendered to overwhelming superiority of numbers, with the express stipulation of protection from the Indians, the bad faith of Proctor in permitting the scalping, mangling, torturing and killing of upwards of five hundred surrendered men by the ruthless savages, are events familiar to the student of American history.

President Madison's appointment of Gen. Cass to the governorship of the territory of Michigan, seems to have been the commencement of a new era in her destiny. It was the dawn of her prosperity. Through his influence the public lands were surveyed, and in 1816, by public proclamation of the President, were brought into market for sale. In 1819, Michigan was permitted to send a delegate to Congress, and in the same year the Indians, by treaty, yielded up to the state a large portion of the southern peninsula.

In 1832 occurred the Black Hawk War, but this was confined chiefly in its effects to that portion of the Territory of Michigan which now constitutes the State of Wisconsin.

By a census of the free white inhabitants in 1834, Michigan found herself entitled to Stateship, but her admission into the Union was delayed by a dispute with regard to her southern boundary, which lasted until 1837, at which time she took her place among the states. Detroit was the capital of the State until 1847, when by act of the Legislature it was located at Lansing. The present constitution of the State was adopted in convention at Lansing, August 5, 1850.

FACE OF THE COUNTRY.

The surface of the Lower or Southern Peninsula is chiefly of a gently undulating character, the hills never rising to the dignity of mountains, and seldom so percipitous as to interfere with the plow share. The central portion, midway between Lake St. Clair and Lake Michigan, attains an average altitude of 200 feet above the level of the lakes, though the dividing ridge is somewhat east of the longitudinal center, making the eastern slope somewhat more abrubt than the western. Some portions are very level. The region surrounding Saginaw Bay, and especially on the Saginaw River and its tributaries, is of this character. Monroe county and a portion of Wayne are also of this character. This conformation renders these districts subject to miasmatic fevers during their early settlement, but as the country matures these miasmatic influences disappear entirely. The southwestern counties contain considerable fine prairie land, while the shores of Lake Michigan are composed to a great extent of sand hills, many of which rise to the height of one hundred and two hundred feet. A remarkable and pleasing feature of the Southern Peninsula, is that it is besprinkled with beautiful little inland lakes of pure fresh water, varying in extent from one acre to a thousand acres or more. These usually have a gravelly bottom and contain plenty of fish. Their water is generally cold, indicating that they are fed by springs from the bottom. Many of them have no visible outlet.

Unlike the Southern, the Northern Peninsula is greatly diversified by mountains, hills, valleys and plains. The eastern portion to the celebrated pictured rocks of Schoolcraft county is much less broken than the western. The Porcupine mountains form the dividing ridge between Lake Superior and Lake Michigan. The highest peaks of these are nearly 2,000 feet above the level of the lakes, some of them destitute of vegetation. The scenery of the Porcupine mountains is wild and picturesque, especially towards the western boundary of the State. The Northern Peninsula, with the exception of the sand plains, is mostly covered with dense forests. It contains millions of acres of pine lands. It is abundantly supplied with water, though none of the streams are large. It has about 800 miles of lake coast, and very much of it is accessible by lake vessels.

RIVERS.

The rivers of Michigan, with the exception of St. Clair, Detroit and Sault St. Marie, which might perhaps more properly be denominated straits, are comparatively smaller than those of other States. The largest, with the exception of those named, are the Saginaw, Grand, Muskegon and St. Joseph. Of the other streams in the Lower Peninsula, the Kalamazoo, Cheboygan, Thunder Bay, Raisin, Huron and Clinton, are the more important. The chief rivers of the Upper Peninsula, are the Montreal, Great Iron, Ontonagon, Huron, Menominee, Chocolate, St. Johns and Manistee.

SOIL AND NATURAL PRODUCTIONS.

The soil of Michigan is exceedingly variable, though generally productive. That of the Southern Peninsula is not often exceeded in richness and adaptation to the growth of any and all of the materials which sustain human life. Portions of it are timbered with white pine, spruce, hemlock, birch, oak, maple, ash and elm, while much of it consists of those beautiful natural lawns called oak openings, which are covered with scattering trees without undergrowth. Other portions consist of timbered lands of black walnut, hickory, linden, elm, cottonwood, aspen, sycamore, cypress, cedar, chestnut, paw-paw, &c.

Though the surface of the Northern Peninsula is rugged, and the soil less adapted to the production of the staple products of more favored climes, yet its great strength is evinced by the vast forests it has produced. These consist mainly of white and yellow pine, oak, hickory and sugar maple. In this region the winters are rigorous and long, and the snow deep. The deep snows, however, do not interfere with, but rather promote the growth of the cereals and fruit. But the seasons are too short to mature Indian corn. The staple agricultural products of the Southern Peninsula are wheat, Indian corn, oats, potatoes, hay, butter, wool and live stock. The potatoe is indigenous to the Leelanaw, Grand Traverse and some other of the northern counties. There is probably no State in the Union whose natural resources are so diversified, by which we mean no one that contains within itself such a variety of the materials that constitute the means of living as Michigan. Other States may get a great name by producing vast quantities of one great staple as, corn, cotton, wheat or coal, but are dependent upon other States or foreign countries for nearly all their supplies.

It would hardly disturb the prosperity of Michigan were she isolated from the rest of the world. She produces her own wheat, and corn, and oats, besides sending a large surplus to other markets. She produces her own beef, and pork, and mutton, and lard and tallow, and has something left for her neighbors. She produces her own wool, and her own cloth and leather. Her fishing interests have already become vast. As far back as 1853, fourteen years ago, her annual product of white fish was 47,203 pounds. And now, in the product of this variety of fish, Michigan far outstrips all the other States combined. As for fruit, the eastern shore of Lake Michigan has already become the great fruit-growing district of the Union. Her coal beds cover 7,000 square miles. Her saline deposits are the strongest and purest, and if her salt manufactures continue to increase in the ratio they have done for a few years past, in less than a decade they will distance those of famous Onondaga. The vast pineries of Michigan are her glory and her pride. They are not inexhaustible, but before they are exhausted they will make her rich. Her annual product of lumber is now nearly, if not quite, 1,000,000,000 feet. This amount of lumber would build more than 40,000 houses for the accommodation of six persons each. That is, we can furnish homes for 240,000 persons annually. If, with our present imperfectly developed lumber interest, we can do this, what results may we not expect when time shall have developed our full capacity.

But if we stagger under the vastness of our lumber interest, what shall we say of our mineral resources? These are absolutely inexhaustible by finite means. We have as yet scarcely passed the vestibule of that vast storehouse of treasure. Seven years ago, in 1860, the value of our annual product of copper was more than twice as great as that of all the other States together. The United States Census Report, of 1860, establishes three points in regard to Michigan copper:

1. That Michigan mined, in 1860, nearly one-half the ore produced in the United States.

2. That in value, Michigan copper ore exceeded two-thirds of the total product of that year.

3. That Michigan copper exceeds in purity that of any other State, and that in quantity we stand unrivaled.

And our iron interest is now nearly if not quite equal to that of our copper. Imperfectly as this interest is developed, we now rank as the second State in the Union in the quantity of ore mined, and first in purity and strength of material. And as to quantity of raw material, the Northern Peninsula contains mountains of solid iron ore.

The gypsum or plaster beds of Michigan deserve also a passing notice. Those of Kent county, near Grand Rapids, have been known and worked several years, and enjoy a high reputation for fertilizing and various other properties. The quantity mined during the year 1864, was 14,000 tons. Recently a very rich and extensive bed has been discovered in Iosco county, near Tawas city. It is called the Alabaster mine, and is believed to be fully equal, if not superior, to the Grand Rapids plaster.

Much of the prosperity of Michigan is due to her grand system of internal improvements. It is astonishing how rapidly development and progress follow in the wake of the locomotive. It is interesting and suggestive to mark the difference between those districts traversed by railroads and those which are not. But for the Michigan Central, where would have been our beautiful chain of cities, beginning with Ypsilanti and ending with Niles? They would have been with Hastings, and Charlotte, and Paw Paw, and Cassopolis, and St. Joseph. And with railroad facilities, these latter places might rival Kalamazoo, and Grand Rapids, and Adrian. Even Detroit, though she fails to recognize the fact, owes more of her greatness to the circumstance of being a railroad centre, than to her position as a seaport town. The locomotive brings us en rapport with all the world. Already Michigan makes consignments direct to Liverpool via the Grand Trunk Railway, and in the next decade we may expect to see Marquette and Ontonagon in direct and neighborly communication with Damascus and Calcutta.

Of the three great thoroughfares that now span the Southern Peninsula—the Michigan Southern & Northern Indiana, the Michigan Central, and the Detroit & Milwaukee Railroads—it would be difficult to determine which is the most important. Indeed it would seem to be out of the question for Michigan to dispense with either.

THE MICHIGAN SOUTHERN & NORTHERN INDIANA RAILROAD.

This great line of travel was originally chartered in 1835, and was "to commence with the navigable waters of the River Raisin, and to pass through or as near as may be to the villages of Adrian, Hillsdale, Coldwater, Branch, Centreville, Constantine, Mottville, Adamsville, Edwardsburg, crossing the St. Joseph at Bertrand, and terminating at New Buffalo." The entire length of the road then contemplated, was 183 miles. The main line and its branches now traverse more than 500 miles, connecting both Detroit and Toledo with Chicago. The several lengths of the main line and its branches, are as follows:

Toledo to Chicago	244 miles.
Detroit to Adrian	74 "
Monroe to Toledo	24 "
Adrian to Jackson	47 "
Toledo to Elkhart (air line)	128 "
Total	517 "

Several of these branch roads subserve the convenience of the public far more than the interest of the Company. This road furnishes one of the best modes of transit from New York to Chicago and the great west. That of the Michigan Central or the Detroit & Milwaukee may be, perhaps, considered equal to it, with the possible objection with some of traversing foreign dominions. The "air line" branch, which traverses only the States of Indiana and Ohio, very materially shortens the distance between Toledo and Chicago. The main line passes through the most productive section of Michigan, the prairies and famous oak openings of St. Joseph, Branch, Hillsdale, and Lenawee counties, and the rapid growth of the beautiful cities and villages along its line, attest the great benefit it has conferred. The management of the road has always enjoyed a high reputation for its care for the comfort and convenience of passengers, and for its promptness in executing all business entrusted to its care. Much of its present prosperity and popularity is due to the eminent ability and efficiency of its accomplished Superintendent, Mr. Charles F. Hatch.

THE MICHIGAN CENTRAL RAILROAD.

This road was chartered to a private company in 1831, as the "Central, or Detroit & St. Joseph Railroad." It was to traverse its present line to Kalamazoo, terminating thence at St. Joseph. In 1837, when in the process of construction, the State bought out the chartered rights of the company. In 1838 it was completed to Ypsilanti, and the first scream of the locomotive in Michigan rang out upon the frozen air in January of that year. in 1844 the road passed into the hands of the company now owning it. It is one continuous line of 284 miles, passing through the counties of Wayne, Washtenaw, Jackson, Calhoun, Kalamazoo, Van Buren, Cass, and Berrien. By its connections with the Great Western Railway of Canada, it enjoys unexcelled facilities for communcation with the east, and by its connections with the "Joliet Cut Off," it opens a continuous line to St. Louis. Its rolling stock is of the best quality, and no pains have been spared in its management to ensure the safety, convenience and comfort of the traveling public. Mr. R. N. Rice, the indefatigable head of the company, has few peers in the annals of railroad enterprise.

DETROIT & MILWAUKEE RAILROAD.

The original project of this road was to form a connecting link in a line from Boston, passing through Massachusetts, New York, Upper Canada, Michigan, Wisconsin, and terminating at the Mississippi River. It was to begin at Port Huron and terminate at Grand Haven. That portion of it, however, extending from Port Huron to Corunna, is not yet built, and Detroit and Grand Haven are the termini. It passes through Wayne, Oakland, Genesee, Shiawassee, Clinton, Ionia, Kent and Ottawa counties. The principal cities and villages along its line are, Pontiac, Holly, Fentonville, Owosso, Corunna, Ovid, St. Johns, Ionia, and Grand Rapids. This road is 189 miles long, and was opened its entire length in November, 1858. Passing as it does through the heart of the Lower Peninsula, it has had a vast influence in developing the industry and resources of Michigan. The splendid steamships "Detroit" and "Milwaukee" ply regularly between Grand Haven and Milwaukee, in connection with this road. Under the efficient management of its present Superintendent, Mr. Thos. Bell, the future prosperity of the Detroit & Milwaukee Railroad is fully assured.

THE FLINT & HOLLY RAILROAD.

This road is only 17 miles long, but is important as connecting the Detroit & Milwaukee Railroad with the Flint and Pere Marquette. It passes through the flourishing village of Grand Blanc.

FLINT & PERE MARQUETTE RAILROAD.

Only 26 miles of this road is completed, extending from Flint, the county seat of Genesee county, to East Saginaw. When finished it is to be 172 miles in length, and traverse the counties of Genesee, Saginaw, Midland, Isabella, Mecosta, Osceola, Lake and Mason, terminating at Pere Marquette, on the eastern shore of Lake Michigan. In 1857 the lands donated by Congress to the State of Michigan, to aid in the construction of railroads, were conferred by the Legislature on this road, but, owing to the financial derangement of that period, the work was not commenced until 1858. In 1860 26 miles, its present length, was completed. This road is important as connecting the vast salt and lumber interests of the Saginaw Valley with the outer world by rail.

AMBOY, LANSING & TRAVERSE BAY RAILROAD.

This road seems to have been abandoned, the only section of it ever built—that extending from Lansing to Owosso and known as the "Ramshorn"—having recently passed into the hands of the Jackson, Lansing and Saginaw Railroad Company.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY.

This is the longest continuous road in the world, reaching from Portland, Maine, via Montreal and Toronto in Canada, to Detroit, a line of more than a thousand miles of unbroken rail, with the exception of the passage of the St. Clair River, at Port Huron. It forms a connection near Detroit with the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad, and thus, perhaps, might not inappropriately be termed the first section of the Pacific Railroad. It connects, also, with the Michigan Central. Its length in the State of Michigan, from Detroit to Port Huron, is 62 miles.

THE GRAND RIVER VALLEY RAILROAD,

Now in process of construction, is to extend, when completed, from Jackson to Grand Rapids, through the counties of Jackson, Eaton, Barry and Kent. This will give railroad facilities to Eaton and Barry counties, two fine agricultural districts, which have heretofore been entirely without them. This company has the use of ten miles of the road already constructed by the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Company, by paying an annual rent equal to the interest of one-half the cost of that portion of said road. From this point, or junction, to Charlotte, the road is very nearly completed, and it is expected that the entire line will be completed during the present year. Preliminary steps have been taken also for the organization of a company to continue the line from Grand Rapids to Muskegon. These roads, with the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana to Lenawee Junction, and the "Jackson Branch" of that road, would make a road from Lake Erie to Lake Michigan, varying no where over ten miles from a direct line, and about 200 miles in length.

GRAND TRUNK RAILROAD OF MICHIGAN.

This is another important railroad, which is now being surveyed from Port Huron, via Lansing, to Chicago.

THE PENINSULAR RAILROAD,

Leading from Escanawba, on Green Bay, to Marquette, on Lake Superior, is the only one of importance in the Northern Peninsula.

THE ST. MARY'S FALLS SHIP CANAL.

The St. Mary's River, or Strait, connects the waters of Lake Superior with those of Lake Huron. Near the village of "Sault Ste Marie" the river makes a descent of about 17 feet in a distance of one mile, destroying the navigation between these lakes. In 1852 Congress granted to the State of Michigan 750,000 acres of land to aid in constructing a ship canal around these rapids. The work was commenced in 1853 and completed in 1855. Some idea of the magnitude of the work and the difficulties in the way of prosecuting it, may be gained by reference to the fact that every article of consumption, machinery, working implements and materials, timber for gates, stone for locks, had all to be transported from Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, and other lake ports, to the canal, that the time specified for the completion of the work included the cholera season of 1854, and that the high latitude of the place very essentially shortened up the season of navigation which was so indispensable to the prosecution of the work. But the indomitable energy and efficiency of the contracting party (which included such names as those of Erastus Corning and J. P. Fairbanks, of New York), were equal to the occasion, and in May, 1855, the canal was completed, accepted by the commissioners, and turned over to the State. Its advantage to the State of Michigan in opening the vast mining and timber regions of Lake Superior are too self-evident to require comment.

EDUCATION.

One of the most distinguishing characteristics of Michigan, is her liberal educational policy. No one can have traveled to any extent in the State without being struck with it. Scarcely a village but has a massive brick edifice, dedicated to the education of the youth. Many of these are models of architectural beauty and taste, surrounded by beautifully shaded grounds, and supplied with all the apparatus and paraphernalia that can be devised to make the path to learning attractive. The perpetuity of free government depends upon the general intelligence and virtue of its people, and the prosperity of a State that appreciates this fact is already assured. Michigan does appreciate it, and her school-houses are the proudest monuments that could be erected to the intelligence of the present generation. The Constitution of the State enjoins upon the Legislature "the encouragement of learning and the general diffusion of knowledge among the people." It provides for a Superintendent of Public Instruction, for a general system of Common School organization, for the establishment of at least one library in each town, and for the application of all penal and military fines for the support of these libraries.

A vast improvement upon our primary school system has been of late years made by the establishment of "Union" or graded schools. These schools combine the academic grade of instruction with that of the common school, thus affording the facilities for acquiring the requisite knowledge of the higher branches to enter colleges and universities.

THE STATE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN,

Located at Ann Arbor, is the largest institution of the kind in the United States. Its students at present number about 1,200. For a more particular description of it, see Ann Arbor in the body of this work.

THE STATE REFORM SCHOOL,

Established at Lansing in 1856, is an institution designed to afford to homeless boys of a tender age an opportunity to escape from a career of crime which would otherwise await them, and to teach them how to gain an honorable livelihood.

A NORMAL SCHOOL,

designed for the education of teachers of both sexes was established at Ypsilanti, in the year 1852.

A STATE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

is located in the township of Meridan, near Lansing. It was organized in 1857 and its design, as its name indicates, is to afford thorough instruction in agriculture, and the sciences connected therewith. This institution combines physical with intellectual labor, and has connected with it a farm of 676 acres, to combine experimental with theoretical farming.

Among the very best of our educational institutions is the located at Flint. It is free to all the deaf, dumb and blind of Michigan, between the ages of ten and thirty years, and all are entitled to an education without charge for board or tuition.

Thus we see the high ground our State has taken in regard to popular education.—Nor are we behind in regard to our private schools and colleges. At Adrian, Albion, Kalamazoo, Hillsdale, Lansing and Olivet are colleges of the first respectability, and other institutions of learning of a high order are scattered throughout the State. Several of these may be found in Detroit, as the Classical and High School, The Detroit Female Seminary, The Michigan Female Seminary, The Academy of the Sacred Heart, etc. Besides these Michigan has various Commercial colleges, where facilities are afforded young men for obtaining a thorough business education, without the expense attendant upon a regular collegiate course of study. Among these that of Albion, under the Presidency of Hon. Ira Mayhew, has acquired a national reputation, deriving patronage not only from Michigan, but from states in all quarters of the Union. The "chain" of Commercial colleges of Ann Arbor, Adrian, Jackson and Grand Rapids, conducted by A. C. Parsons, Esq., of Ann Arbor, is also pre eminently deserving of notice.

INDIANS OF MICHIGAN.

In 1864 there were about 7,000 Indians in Michigan. Of these about 1,000 are Chippewas, residing in the northern Peninsula, near the head of Keweenaw bay. About 4,500 are Ottawas, residing in the counties of Oceana, Mason, Grand Traverse, Emmet, Cheboygan, Mackinaw and Chippewa. The Chippewas of Saginaw, number about 1,500, and are mostly inhabitants of Bay and Isabella counties. The Chippewas, Ottowas and Pottawattomies number less than 200, and are mostly in Cass and Van Buren counties. The Pottawattomies of Huron, are about 50 in number, and reside in Calhoun county.

Thus the race of people so dreaded and formidable in the early history of Michigan, has dwindled to a mere handful, while the Anglo-Saxon population of the State has swelled to nearly a million. The Indian will not conform to the usages of civilized life. Notwithstanding the schools and mechanic shops supported among them by the federal government; notwithstanding the patient, persistent efforts of missionaries, both Jesuit and Protestant, among them from the first discovery of the continent, he is the same uncouth, uncivilized being that he was in the days of King Philip and Powhattan. Unlike the Indian, the negro conforms to the habits of civilization and even of refinement, with facility. Had legislative munificence and religious zeal done as much for the latter as for the former, he wouldhave risen far above his present status, with a fair prospect of becoming, ultimately, the peer of the white man.

THE NORTHERN HALF OF THE SOUTHERN PENINSULA.

It is a remarkable fact that, while emigration has pushed its way far beyond the Mississippi, to Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, and across the continent, to Oregon and California; while the high latitudes of Minnesota are dotted with pleasant and comfortable homesteads, the northern half of the Lower Peninsula of Michigan remains almost an unbroken wilderness. By the census of 1860, ten of the counties of this portion of the State contained not a single white inhabitant, and twenty-five others contiguous to them contained an aggregate population of only 41,000. With a great extent of Lake coast, and accessible at all points, watered by a thousand rivers and brooks, and sprinkled with silvery lakelets, why is this vast region still the undisturbed haunt of the bear, the elk, the moose and the panther? Doubtless the heavy timber of these regions has discouraged emigrants from settling here, and it is no misfortune to Michigan that the broad prairies of the trans-Mississippi States have presented a more inviting field to the agriculturist. These forests constitute much of her wealth, and it is sheer vandalism to cut them away and burn them to make farms.

It was the opinion of the Hon. D. C. Leach, Indian Agent for Michigan, that the main reason why these timbered regions have been so long passed by and neglected, is that erroneous views have generally prevailed with regard to their soil and climate. He says, "Even among people of our own State, the soil and climate of these regions have been supposed to be unfavorable to agricultural pursuits. It was said the country is low and swampy, and liable to late and early frosts. It was believed also that fever and ague was the rightful proprietor of all this region, and ready to lay violent hands upon all who ventured within his domains." If we except five or six counties lying about Saginaw Bay and north of it on Lake Huron, we may safely state that the balance of this region is healthful and favorable to agriculture. It is true that the winters are longer and the snows deeper than in the southern counties of the State, but the transition from cold to warm weather is more direct, and unaccompanied by those cold, backward springs that characterize more southern latitudes. The best of winter wheat is produced here, and all the cereals flourish, though only the hardier varieties of Indian corn mature, on account of the shortness of the season. Peaches, grapes and strawberries are grown successfully in Grand Traverse and Leelanaw counties, and it is believed that these counties are even better for fruit growing purposes than those farther south.

Many have supposed this to be a mineral region, and considerable money has been spent in searching for them, particularly for coal. But if Geology is to be relied on, such efforts will continue unsuccessful.

It is simply a pleasant and healthful agricultural region, and as such commends itself to the attention of those who would like a forest home.

TEMPLE OF MUSIC

The following description is taken from the Chicago "Evening Journal":

"We have seen many Music Houses in this country, and the best in the chief cities of Europe; but not one excels Reed's Temple of Music. It consists of a triple suite of warerooms, with as many entrances—one on Dearborn street and two on Randolph street. Entering on Dearborn street, you find a large room, tastily furnished and filled with musical merchandise of every kind.

"Passing under an arch, you enter the main hall, and here you find an immense number of fine Pianos of every style and price, and of twenty different makers. This hall is handsomely decorated with paper hangings, and the walls hung with fine engravings and oil paintings. Entering through another arch, you come into a third room, handsomely furnished and filled with a jam of Pianos. Long shelves run along the wall, and are laden down with Melodeons and Organs. In fact, music here is literally piled up! We feel certain, after looking this great establishment through, that those who go East to buy can do as well, if not better, nearer home. We advise all our readers, when they come to Chicago, not to miss the opportunity to pay these rooms a visit."

Who makes the Best Piano?

James M. Wehli, an English artist whose brilliant execution dazzled and delighted our American public a short time since, declared upon his arrival in this country his surprise and gratification at finding in the Chickering pianos qualities of tone and power equal if not superior to the pianos made in Europe. Upon his return to the old country he took with him one of the Chickering instruments, for the express purpose of ascertaining the opinion of the greatest European artists and manufacturers.

The firm of Collard & Collard, and the firm of Broadwood & Sons, both of London, England, are two of the oldest piano manufacturers in the world, having been engaged in the manufacture of these instruments since the first inception of the piano, and have introduced many of its most important improvements.

The following letters, written by members of these firms, are a splendid tribute to the inventive genius of the American people, and individually to the Messrs. Chickering & Sons:

The fact that this testimony in favor of the Chickering Piano comes from Manufacturers engaged in the same business, renders their opinion of great value. Attention is called to the endorsement of their opinion by Mr. Hatton, the leading pianist of London.

It should be borne in mind these testimonials have been received within the past few weeks by the Messrs. Chickering & Sons.

LONDON, January 11, 1866.

JAMES M. WEHLI, ESQ.:

MY DEAR SIR:—I have great pleasure in asking you to convey to Messrs. Chickering the expression of my highest approval of their instrument. It is, I consider, not merely the best instrument of American manufacture that I have tried, but one of the finest Grand Piano-fortes that has ever come under my observation, and the Messrs. Chickering may well be proud of having turned out from their manufactory an instrument which, for touch, quality, power and workmanship, it would be very difficult to surpass in any part of the world. Dear Sir, very sincerely yours,

CHAS. D. COLLARD,

(Firm of Collard & Collard, Piano-forte manufacturers, London.)

LONDON, August 22, 1866.

JAMES M. WEHLI, ESQ.,

MY DEAR SIR:—As you are going back to the United States, I must beg you to remember me kindly to the Messrs. Chickering. Tell them I was delighted with their grand piano-forte—as good an instrument, I think, as was ever turned out, both in touch and tone.

Wishing you, etc., I remain ever truly, H. F. BROADWOOD,

(Firm of I. Broadwood & Sons, Piano-forte manufacturers, London.)

LONDON, July 20, 1866.

Messrs. CHICKERING & SONS:

GENTS:—I have just been invited by Messrs. Collard to try a grand piano-forte manufactured by you, and I have no hesitation in endorsing the opinion of my old friend, Mr. C. D. Collard, viz., that it is the finest instrument I ever played on.

Believe me, gentlemen, most faithfully yours, J. L. HATTON.

ALPENA.

The county seat of Alpena county is a new post village, situated on Thunder Bay, at the mouth of Thunder river, in the northern part of the Lower Peninsula of the State of Michigan. It contains two church organizations, a lodge of Masons and one of Good Templars, a weekly newspaper (Alpena County Pioneer), several stores, groceries and mechanic shops, and also several mills and manufactories. The Thunder river drains an undeveloped timber region of great extent and value, which must ultimately find its way to market via Alpena. As a consequence, this is becoming the objective point of much enterprise and capital. A large town may be looked for here in a very few years. Steamboats ply regularly between this point and Detroit, also between here and Saginaw.

ANN ARBOR.

A township of Washtenaw county, containing an incorporated city of the same name. Population of township, exclusive of city, 2,300.

ANN ARBOR.

An important and flourishing city of Washtenaw county, situated on both sides of the Huron river, in a high and healthy location, and on the Michigan Central Railroad, 37 miles from Detroit, and 247 from Chicago. The streets of the city are laid out with great regularity, and are handsomely bordered with shade trees.

In 1833 the village was incorporated, and in 1851 a city charter was obtained. The present population of the city is about 7,000, and of the township, outside of the city limits, about 3,000, making a total of 10,000 inhabitants.

Ann Arbor is extensively known as the place where the UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN is situated, now the largest university in America. The whole number of students attending it in 1867 was a little less than 1,500, all young men, and very considerably adding to the population and business of the place. These students board with families in the city, there being no "dormitories" or "commons" connected with the University. The good order prevailing among the students, and their almost total exemption from the pranks and feuds that have characterized colleges that adhere to the "dormitory" plan, should commend this example to others. The buildings, though no effort for architectural effect has been made, are large and elegant. The main University Square embraces 40 acres, surrounded by streets. On this square are nine buildings, as follows: one 110 feet long 42 wide, and 4 stories high, used exclusively for lecture-rooms, of which there are 13, and one room for each of the two Literary Societies, and one for the Young Men's Christian Association. The society rooms are elegantly furnished. The second building is of the same size, used almost exclusively for the Museum of Geology, Zoology, Botany, Mineralogy, Antiquities, and the Fine Arts. This is one of the finest museums of the kind in the country. The third is the Law Building, 96 feet long by 70 feet wide, 3 stories high, containing not only convenient rooms for the Law School, but also the General Library Room. The Medical Building consists of a main part, 92 feet by 42 feet, three stories high, and an addition, 60 feet square, four stories high, and not surpassed in convenience and size by any building in the country devoted to such a use. It has two large lecture rooms—capable each of seating about 600 persons, a Medical Museum, Dissecting Room, Offices, &c. The Chemical Laboratory is an irregular building, partly two stories high, capable of accommodating about 50 students at once, engaged in analysis, well furnished with steam engine for ventilation, and other needed purposes. Besides these is the President's house, a large square three-story building, and three other dwelling houses.

The University has another lot of land, about five acres, on which is situated the beautiful Astronomical Observatory, mostly the gift of liberal friends of science, in Detroit.

The educational advantages of this city are unsurpassed, there being, independent of the University, a large number of excellently managed schools, both public and private. The "Union School," is a beautiful structure, having a front of 100, with a depth of 50 feet, and a hall 100 by 40 feet, and 20 feet high; the building will accommodate 400 pupils.

The city enjoys a flourishing trade, and contains many fine stores, together with extensive manufactories of flour, machinery, iron, leather, malt liquors, etc. It has a National Bank, two private banking houses, four newspapers, nine churches, five hotels, Masonic, Odd Fellows, and other societies.

The "Washtenaw Agricultural Society" owns, within the city limits, a finely fitted up fair ground, of 21 acres, with all the necessary buildings for their annual exhibitions, etc.

Following the description of the State University, will be found a complete list of the various societies, churches, business men, city officers, etc.

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN.

The University of Michigan has been regarded and provided for, from the beginning, as an essential part of the system of education established by the State. In 1804, by an act of Congress, a township of land in Michigan was set apart for the support of a University, and in 1817, preliminary steps were taken by the Territorial Government for its organization. In 1821 trustees were appointed, and in 1824 another township of land was devoted to its support by Congress. In 1841 the first building was erected, and the University proper was opened. The Endowment Fund of the University amounts to about $500,000.

The Constitution of the State requires of the Legislature to "provide for and establish a system of Primary Schools, whereby a school shall be kept without charge for tuition, at least three months in each year, in every School District in the State." Primary Schools, therefore, are found in all the towns. In the larger villages, or wherever the people are sufficiently enterprising, it is customary to unite two or more School Districts into one, and establish Union Schools, in which a number of teachers may be employed, and by a combination of material and a division of labor, all the advantages of a classical and scientific Academy, or Preparatory School for the University, may be enjoyed.

The design of the people of Michigan, in the establishment of the University, was evidently to provide for the higher education of such of the pupils of the Union Schools, and others, as might desire to avail themselves of its advantages. The Regents and Faculty of the University recognize the justice of this demand, and it is therefore their object to furnish all the facilities for education belonging to a true University.

Three Departments of the University are in operation, as follows: The Department of Science, Literature, and the Arts; the Department of Medicine and Surgery; the Department of Law.

The Department of Science, Literature, and the Arts, is devoted to general instruction and discipline. The studies are arranged so as to constitute several courses. The Classical Course of four years corresponds with the undergraduate course in the oldest American Colleges. The Scientific Course, also of four years, requires more attention to the English, French, and German Languages and Literature, and to Mathematics and Natural Science. The Course of Civil Engineering corresponds partly with the Scientific Course, but embraces much peculiar to itself, and requires four years' study. A Course in Mining Engineering is also in operation. Students who desire it may pursue a special course of study in Analytical Chemistry. Students who are not candidates for a degree can enter any class in any study for which they are found prepared, on examination, pursuing what are called Selected Studies.

The Department of Medicine and Surgery presents all the advantages of a fully furnished and first class Medical School. The instruction is carried on mostly by lectures, and the students are enabled, by availing themselves of the advantages presented, to compose the theses and pass the examinations which are to test their scholarship and prove them worthy of graduating as Doctors of Medicine.

The Department of Law is designed to present all the facilities that can be desired in a Law School of the highest character.

The Degree of Civil Engineer is conferred upon students who pass the examinations in the School of Engineering.

The Degree of Bachelor of Arts is conferred upon students who complete the Classical Course, and pass the examinations in the same.

The Degree of Bachelor of Science is conferred upon students who complete the Scientific Course, and pass the examinations in the same.

The Degrees of Master of Arts and Master of Science are conferred, respectively, upon Bachelors of Arts and Bachelors of Science, according to the following conditions:

1. The candidate must be a graduate either of this or of some other collegiate institution empowered to confer degrees.

2. He must pursue at least two of the courses for a year, designated in a programme, published by the University.

3. He must sustain an examination before the Faculty in at least three of the studies so attended—the studies to be elected by the candidate.

4. He must present a thesis to the Faculty on one of the subjects chosen for examination.

The second Degree may thus be obtained, on examination, one year after the first Degree.

The Master's Degree will also be conferred upon graduates of three years' standing, who shall have engaged, during that period, in professional, or in literary and scientific studies.

The above-described higher courses will not be restricted to graduates and candidates for the second Degrees, but will be open to all who shall give satisfactory evidence of ability to profit by them.

The Degree of Doctor of Medicine is conferred on those who comply with the conditions of the Department of Medicine and Surgery.

The Degree of Bachelor of Laws is conferred on those who comply with the conditions of the Department of Law.

The University Library is finely arranged in the large room appropriated to it in the lower story of the Law Building, and contains now about twenty thousand books, all of which, having been purchased within a few years, are valuable. An appropriation of about a thousand dollars annually is made for its enlargement.

The Law Library is in an upper room of the same building, and is open to students of the Law Department, ten hours each working day, under such regulations as make it a pleasant place, not only for consultation, but regular study.

"The Christian Library Association of the University of Michigan," is a Society organized for the purpose of procuring, by donation and purchase, a Free Circulating Library of moral and religious works. Its affairs are managed by a Board of Directors, of which the President of the University is President; two Directors are chosen by the Board of Regents; three by the Faculties; two by the Students' Christian Association; and two by the Christian Library Association, from persons not connected with the University. It has already procured a few excellent books, which occupy a place specially appropriated to them in the General Library, and is open to all members of the University.

The Astronomical Observatory, a donation of citizens of Detroit, is situated half a mile from the University ground, in Ann Arbor, on a hill 150 feet above the Huron River. The building consists of a main part, with a movable dome 21 feet in diameter, and two wings, one of which contains the rooms for the observer, while in the other is mounted the splendid Meridian-Circle presented by H. N. Walker, Esq., of Detroit. This instrument, one of the largest and best of its kind, was imported from Berlin. The focal length of its telescope is eight and a half feet, and the clear aperture of the object-glass is six and a half inches. It is furnished with two circles, a little more than three feet in diameter, and each circle is provided with four microscopes, by which the divisions of the circle can be read as near as one-tenth of a second. The same room contains a siderial clock, made by Tiede, in Berlin, and two collimators, north and south from the Meridian-Circle, for the determination of the error of collimation. The west wing contains a Chronograph, with Bond's new isodynamic escapement, for recording observations by the electro-magnetic method. In the dome is mounted a large refracting telescope, with an object-class thirteen inches in diameter, constructed by the late Henry Fitz, of New York. The performance of this instrument is entirely satisfactory, and ranks it among the best and largest in the world.

The University Museum embraces the following valuable collections, illustrative of Science, Art, History, Agriculture, and Ethnology.

I. NATURAL HISTORY.—1. A choice collection of Minerals, embracing over six thousand specimens, principally European. This collection was purchased of the late Baron Lederer, and is called the "Lederer Collection." Also a rich collection of the Mineral Species of Michigan, including all the varieties of Copper Ore and Associated Minerals from the different localities of the Lake Superior district. This collection is partly the fruit of the State Geological Survey, and partly the result of the subsequent labors of Professor Douglass.

2. The collections in Geology, consisting of:

1st. The large and complete series of lithological and palæontological specimens brought together by the State Geological Surveys, of which about a hundred fossil species have already become the types of original descriptions.

2d. The White Collection, consisting of 1,018 distinct entries and about 6,000 specimens. Of this collection, 280 entries are crinoids, mostly carboniferous, constituting one of the finest representations in existence, of that beautiful order. Two hundred and thirty-two species in the collection are the types of original descriptions.

3d. The Rominger Collection, embracing about 1,200 species from the Mesozoic formations of central Europe.

4th. Smithsonian Deposites, consisting for the present of a collection of foreign and domestic specimens of building stones.

5th. Miscellaneous Donations.

The entire Geological Cabinet is estimated to contain over 7,000 distinct entries and 26,000 specimens.

3. A very large Zöological Collection, consisting of:

1st. A complete suit of the Birds which visit Michigan, with most of the Mammals of the State; a nearly complete series of the Reptiles found east of the Rocky Mountains; two thousand species of Mollusca, embracing all the land and fresh-water forms of the Northern and Western States, and a considerable collection of Fishes and Radiata.

2d. The Trowbridge Collection. This is a series of 1,356 entries (3,000 specimens) in most of the classes of the Animal Kingdom, made by Lieut. Trowbridge (late Professor in the University) upon the Pacific coast, with numerous additions from the interior and eastern portions of the continent. It furnishes a very complete illustration of the Fauna of North America. The specimens were all labelled at the Smithsonian Institution, and the Birds and Mammals were among the originals studied by Prof. Baird in his unequaled monographs of those classes.

3d. Smithsonian Deposites, consisting of about 200 skins of birds from the Arctic zone, together with an extremely rare collection of the eggs of Arctic birds; 204 entries of marine shells from the Indo-Pacific, and nearly 200 entries of marine shells from Cape St. Lucas, Mazatlan, and Panama, labeled by Mr. P. P. Carpenter; and 81 entries of Unionidæ.

4th. Miscellaneous Donations.

The whole number of entries in the Zöological Cabinet is over 5,000, and the whole number of specimens not less than 18,000.

4. A Botanical Collection, consisting of:

1st. The plants of the State, collected by the public surveys, and numbering about 1,174 species, 1,500 entries, and 9,000 specimens.

2d. The Houghton Herbanium, collected by the late Prof. Douglass Houghton, M. D., and recently presented to the University by his widow, Mrs. R. R. Richards. It consists of 28 folio cases of dried and labelled plants from various parts of the United States, and is estimated to contain 1,800 species.

3d. A collection of truncheons of the different varieties of wood growing in the United States.

4th. A collection of the seeds of native plants.

The entire Botanical Cabinet embraces probably 2,800 entries and 14,000 specimens.

The Geological, Zöological and Botanical Cabinets together, are estimated to contain about 14,800 separate entries and 58,000 specimens.

II. ETHNOLOGY AND RELICS.—This department of the Museum, now in its incipi-

WATKINS & WOLFF, MANUFACTURERS AND WHOLESALE

ncy, contains various articles of domestic nd warlike use among the North American ndians, and the islanders of the South Paci- c; and sundry relics and memorials of the nterprises of Peace as well as of our great ivil War. It seems eminently appropriate hat the University of Michigan should ake efforts to preserve memorials of the ative tribes so fast disappearing before the arch of civilization; and it is earnestly oped that this department of the Museum ay be deemed a suitable place of deposit r any such relics in the possession of our itizens.

Efforts are making to found in the Uni- ersity a collection illustrating the mate- ials, processes and products of agriculture nd horticulture. The nucleus of such a ollection already exists in, 1st. The otanical and Zöological Cabinets, and the abinet of Economical Geology; 2d. A col- ection of the seeds of cereals and other field nd garden crops; 3d. An interesting col- ection of textile fibres and various substi- utes for cotton, received from the Depart- ent of Agriculture at Washington.

III. The Fine Arts and History.—This ollection was commenced in the year 1855, nd at present comprises:

1. A Gallery of Casts, in full size and in eduction, of the most valuable Ancient tatues and Busts. These were mainly ex- cuted at the Imperial modeling establish- ent of the Louvre, by Desachy, of Paris, nd by the Brothers Micheli, of Berlin.

2. A Gallery of more than two hundred leductions and Models in terra cotta and ther materials. These represent the prin- ipal Statues, Portrait Busts, Vases, and ther Antiquities in the Museo Borbonico nd other European Museums. They were xecuted at Naples.

3. A Gallery of Engravings and Photo- raphic Views, executed in Italy and Greece, lustrating especially the Architectural and culptural Remains of Ancient Rome, Pom- eii, Paestum, Athens and Corinth.

4. The Horace White Collection of His- orical Medallions, comprising, 1st. Four undred and fifty Casts from Antique Gems n the Royal Museum at Berlin, illustrative f Ancient History; 2d. Over five hundred asts illustrative of Mediœval History and f the Renaissance Period; 3d. About five undred Medallion Portraits of Leading ersonages in Modern History. These por- raits were derived from authentic sources, nd reduced with fidelity, and the whole ere cast by Eichler, of Berlin.

Not included with the above are several opies of Modern Busts and Reliefs by Thor- aldsen, Canova, Powers, and others.

IV. Anatomy and Materia Medica.— he Anatomical Museum has been selected and prepared with direct reference to teach- ing. Although it is not deemed necessary to enumerate particularly its contents, a few may be named to indicate the character of the collection.

Besides containing a number of Adult Skeletons, articulated and separate, of the most perfect description, there are prepara- tions illustrating its various stages of devel- opment and change, from its first rudiments of fœtal life to extreme old age; and a vari- ety of partial or complete skeletons of infe- rior animals, to exhibit its various modifica- tions.

It contains, likewise, beautifully prepared Skulls and Teeth, to illustrate first and sec- ond dentition, and others showing many of the diseases to which they are subject.

Various Arterial Preparations, complete and partial, afford good facilities for study- ing the vascular system.

Several hundred Alchoholic Preparations of healthy and diseased structures—human and comparative—furnish important aid in illustrating Physiology and Pathology; while models in plaster and papier mâché, with a valuable collection of Plates, Splints and Surgical Instruments, meet the wants of the more practical branches.

An important addition to these means of illustration has recently been made by an importation from Europe of great beauty and value; among which are a collection of bones of the head, disarticulated and mount- ed, and an extended collection of Wax Models, illustrative of various anatomical and pathological conditions, including rep- resentations of the anatomy of the pelvis and its contents, of several varieties of her- nia, of specimens of small pox and the vac- cine disease, and of a large number of cases in opthalmic surgery, etc.

The Department of the Museum illustra- tive of Materia Medica consists of a very complete suit of Crude Organic Medicinal Substances, embracing between five and six hundred specimens, imported from Paris, put up in beautiful glass-covered half-gallon jars, of uniform appearance, finely display- ed, arranged according to their order in Natural History, and labelled in both French and English; besides about one thousand other specimens of Simple Mineral and Vege- table Substances and Pharmaceutical and Officinal Preparations. Active Principles, etc., arranged in groups convenient for study; and altogether comprising a collection which, in amount, variety, and adaptedness to the purposes of instruction, it is confi- dently believed is not equaled by any of a similar character, even in the older institu- tions in this country.

Besides these actual specimens, Medical Botany is illustrated by between one and two hundred large and finely-colored Plates, framed and glazed, and displayed for observation.

A full suit of Instruments used in Diseases of Females is deposited in the Museum, illustrating the Surgical processes required in this class of cases; and the magnificent Portraits of Cutaneous Diseases, by Dr. Erasmus Wilson, and the no less useful collection by Dr. Robert Willis, illustrate very fully this department of Pathology.

All the above collections are now arranged in connected Galleries, for the purpose of rendering them attractive, as well as accessible, both to students and visitors. The University thus affords a secure deposit for objects of value or curiosity, where they can be classified and exhibited to the best advantage, and be productive of the greatest amount of good. It it to be hoped, therefore, that the Museum will receive accessions, not only through the direct action of the Board of Regents and of the Faculties, but also by donations from individuals, whether graduates or other friends of the Institution. Valuable donations of this kind have already been made.

V. EXPENSES.—The only charges made by the University are: to residents in Michigan, an admission fee of ten dollars; to those who come from other States or countries an admission fee of twenty-five dollars; and to every student an annual payment of ten dollars. The admission fee is paid but once, and entitles the student to the privileges of permanent membership in any Department of the University.

There are no dormitories and no commons connected with the University. Students obtain board and lodging in private families. Many also board themselves in clubs.

The following were the Officers of the University in 1867:

Board of Regents—Rev. Erastus O. Haven, D. D., LL. D., ex officio President of the Board; Thomas D. Gilbert, of Grand Rapids, and Thomas J. Joslin, of Fentonville, whose term of service expires in 1868; Henry C. Knight, of Detroit, and U. Eastman Johnson, of Centreville, whose term of service expires in 1870; James A. Sweezey, of Hastings, and Cyrus M. Stockwell, of Port Huron, whose term of service expires in 1872; Edward C. Walker, of Detroit, and George Willard, of Battle Creek, whose term of service expires in 1874.

John H. Burleson, Secretary and Steward; Donald McIntyre, Treasurer.

Board of Visitors for 1866-7—Rev. G. W. Cowles, of East Saginaw; H. O. Hitchock, M. D., Hon. W. B. Williams, of Allegan.

MEMBERS OF THE FACULTIES AND OTHER OFFICERS.

Rev. Erastus O. Haven, D. D., LL. D., President of the University, Professor of Rhetoric and English Literature.

Rev. George P. Williams, LL. D., Professor of Physics.

BATTLE CREEK.

A township of Calhoun county, containing a portion of the incorporated city of the same name. Population of the township, exclusive of the city, 1,500.

BATTLE CREEK

Is an important city in the western part of Calhoun county, on the Michigan Central Railroad, at the confluence of Battle creek with the Kalamazoo river. It is 120 miles from Detroit, 164 miles from Chicago, and 13 miles from Marshall, the capital of Calhoun county. The city is located in a highly cultivated and productive section of the country, and enjoys an extensive reputation as a market for general produce. The Kalamazoo river furnishes it with an excellent water power, which being pretty well improved, gives the city importance as a manufacturing town. Among the most important manufactures here are those of flour, leather, plaster, cloths, agricultural implements, pumps and water pipe. Battle Creek has eight churches, three union schools, two weekly newspapers, four hotels, about fifty stores, several banking houses and many mechanics and professional men. Its principal streets are paved, and adorned with elegant private residences.

The place was first settled in 1832. It derives its name from a bloodless encounter between a U. S. surveyor and a number of Indians, in which the redskins are said to have got the worst of it. The Michigan Central Railroad was completed to this point in 1849, and the event constitutes a marked epoch in its history. In 1859 it obtained a city charter. Its present population is about 5,000. Postmaster—Tolman W. Hall.

BAY CITY.

An important and flourishing city and seat of justice of Bay county, pleasantly situated upon the east bank of the Saginaw river, about four miles from its mouth, and sixteen below the city of East Saginaw. It is connected with Detroit by regular lines of steamers, and with East Saginaw by steamboat four times a day. The town was laid out in 1836, and until 1857 was known as Lower Saginaw. In 1865 it became a city, and now bids fair to become one of the most important towns in the State. A large number of extensive steam saw mills and salt manufactories are in operation in and about the city. The river is navigable to this point for the largest vessels on the lakes, which gives Bay City an important advantage over the towns further up. The location is elevated and healthy, and the soil of the surrounding country rich and productive. The city contains six churches, representing the Catholic, Methodist, Baptist, Lutheran, Episcopal, and Presbyterian

It has also a street railroad two and three-eighths miles in length, extending through the principal street of the town, and to the village of Portsmouth. The present population of the city is about 5,000. Detroit merchants ship goods to Bay City by steamers or sail vessels, direct, or by railroad to East Saginaw, thence by river steamboats. A daily mail is received.

COLDWATER.

The county seat of Branch county is an incorporated post city, situated on the Michigan Southern Railroad, and on a branch of the Coldwater river, 100 miles southwest of Detroit, and 155 miles from Chicago. It is located in one of the most productive agricultural districts in the State. The surrounding country is level, and mainly under a high state of cultivation. The city is settled mainly by emigrants from New York State, who, with characteristic enterprise and spirit, have spared no pains to make it an attractive abiding place. Besides the county buildings it contains many attractive private residences, a fine Union school house, several beautiful churches, and a number of business blocks. The streets are handsomely laid out, shaded with trees and lighted with gas. The city contains also a national bank and a private banking house, three weekly newspapers, five hotels, four Masonic societies, an agricultural society, about fifty stores, and many professions and mechanical trades. Coldwater was first settled in 1829. It takes its name from the river, which was so called by the Indians on account of the numerous cold springs it contains at their old crossing. The county seat was located here in 1842. The city was incorporated in 1861. Since the completion of the Michigan Southern Railroad to this point in 1851, the place has progressed rapidly, and is now one of the most promising in the State. DENMARK.

A township of Tuscola county, 90 miles north of Detroit, and bordering on Saginaw Bay.

DETROIT.

The commercial emporium of the State of Michigan, and county seat of Wayne county, is situated on the Detroit river, seven miles below Lake St. Clair, and eighteen miles above Lake Erie; 82 miles south east from Lansing, in latitute 42° 24' north and longitude 82° 58' west; 526 miles from Washington. This is by far the most important town in the State, and ranks with Buffalo, Cleveland and Chicago in the chain of lake cities. It has one of the best harbors in the United States, and possesses all the requisite facilities for an extensive commerce.

The early history of Detroit dates back of the Puritans of Plymouth Rock, it having been visited as early as 1610 by the French traders, although it does not appear that there was any permanent settlement of the place until 1701. There is perhaps no city of the United States that has passed through more of the vicissitudes of peace and war, or that was in the early history a point of greater strategic military importance. "Five times its flag has changed, three different soverieigns have claimed its allegiance; twice it has been beseiged by the Indians, once captured in war, and once burned to the ground." It was held by the French until 1760, when it fell into the hands of the English, and in 1785 became a part of the United States. It was incorporated as a village in 1802, burnt in 1805, and re-incorporated in 1815. In 1810 its population was only 770; it is to-day more than 75,000.

The city is lighted by gas, and watered from the Detroit river by a hydraulic establishment in the upper part of the city. It is adorned with several beautiful parks and public squares. Its streets and avenues are broad and spacious, some of the latter having a breadth of 200 feet.

As a manufacturing town Detroit compares favorably with neighboring cities. Her extensive machine shops, for the manufacture of steam engines, mill irons, and machinery of various kinds, her extensive mills and factories for the manufacture of lumber, sash, doors, blinds, pails, etc., her flouring mills, plaster mills, breweries, woolen factories, etc., together constitute a vast and varied industry.

Nor is Detroit behind in her charitable institutions. Her munificence keeps pace with her general industry and enterprise, as her numerous benevolent societies and asylums will attest. And her judicious system of schools, her various literary, historical and scientific societies and enlightened press sufficiently indicate the general intelligence of her people.

EAST SAGINAW.

An incorporated city of Saginaw c ty, situated on the Saginaw river, miles below the junction of the Titt wassee, Shiawassee and Cass rivers, 20 miles above its entrance into Sagi Bay. It is the present terminus of Flint & Pere Marquette railroad. Th one of the most enterprising cities in State. The rapidity of its growth is gestive of magic. In 1850 it was know "Buena Vista," and had a populatio 251. It now has a population of 8,00 upwards. It was incorporated under present name in 1859. It has by far stripped its rivals, Bay and Saginaw ci and now stands without a competitor city of the Saginaw valley. The rive this point is navigable to vessels drav nine feet of water, and the season of n gation generally lasts from the middl March to the last of November. land upon which the city is built is very and level and the soil of a rich, dark vial loam. The city is planked instea paved, and the streets are now traverse a system of street cars, connecting it Saginaw City. Although many of uildings are built of wood and strike the isitor as having a less substantial air than rould be desirable, yet the city contains ery many permanent and well built busi- ess blocks and other buildings. Among he noticeable institutions of the place, are ts hotels, whereof the Everett House is one f peculiar excellence. The proprietors, lessrs. Smith & Crouse, have left nothing ndone to secure the comfort and enjoyment f their guests. The appointments of their able, and bar and laundry are beyond criti- ism. A fine set of billiard tables are con- ected with the establishment for the de- ectation of the lovers of that popular game.

The "Bancroft" is also a first class house.

Like all the towns in this section, lumber s the staple product. The immense forests f heavy timber found on the tributaries of he Saginaw river, together with the excel- ent facilities afforded for the manufacture nd shipment of lumber, will, for many ears, make East Saginaw an important lumber point. Next to lumber is the salt interest, the growth of which since 1860 has been exceedingly rapid. The aggregate value of salt manufactured here in 1865, was $1,190,410.

The fish trade is also considerable and rapidly increasing. The fish are caught chiefly in Saginaw river and its bayous, and consist of pickerel, pike, bass and perch. They are shipped to New York, Cincinnati and other points by express. The amount so shipped during two months in 1865, was 68 tons.

FLINT.

Is the capital of Genesee county. It is a post city of about 5,000 inhabitants, on both sides of Flint river, the centre of a rich agricultural section, and the southern terminus of the Flint and Pere Marquette Railroad. It is also the northern terminus of the Flint and Holly Railroad. It is built on high, rolling ground, and has many fine business blocks and private residences. It has a thriving trade in lumber, grain, wool and general produce. The leading business is lumbering, the heavily timbered regions on the Flint river and its tributaries furnishing the raw material in unlimited quantities. Among the heavy establishments here for the manufacture of lumber, sash, doors, blinds, etc., those of Gov. Crapo are the most extensive. Flint contains, also, two large flouring mills, four hotels, six churches, four iron foundries and machine shops, three weekly newspapers, about 50 stores, and many professional men and mechanics. The Michigan Asylum for the deaf and dumb is located here; a noble structure, and an institution of which the State of Michigan may well be proud. The educational facilities of Flint are up to the standard of the best in the State. Four excellent schools are in operation, a scientific institute, with a museum of 5,000 specimens of the mineralogical, zoological and vegetable productions of the State, a Ladies' Library Association, and other literary and scientific societies. It has also an agricultural society, with fair grounds within the city limits, and a horticultural society.

The first settler of Flint was John Todd, of New York State, who, in 1830, built a tavern and kept a ferry near the present Saginaw bridge. In its early history, Flint was known as "Todd's Ferry." It was incorporated as a city in 1855.

GRAND RAPIDS.

The capital of Kent county is a city of about 12,000 inhabitants. It is built on both sides of the Grand River, 40 miles from its mouth. It derives its name from a descent in the river at this point of about 18 feet in one and a-half miles, and which also furnishes it with an immense water power. The surrounding country is diversified, the westward landscape being level, while that to the eastward is broken and picturesque. Before the construction of the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad, goods were obtained at this point by the river from Grand Haven, and to extend the navigation of the river beyond the rapids, the Government constructed a canal around the rapids on the east side. The railroad has now, however, so far superseded river navigation, that the canal is only used as a water power, and its advantage is so great to the town, even as a water power, that a similar one is now being constructed on the west side, also. With these advantages, it is a matter of no surprise that Grand Rapids is the leading manufacturing town in the State, and destined yet to rival our best New England manufacturing cities. Its principal manufactures at present are flour, leather, machinery, edge tools, lumber, sash, barrels, staves, hubs, ale, plaster, saleratus, carriages and cloths. It has two extensive woolen factories, and the wagon manufactory of William Harrison, Esq., is the largest in the State, with perhaps the exception of that connected with the State Prison at Jackson. The trade of Grand Rapids is extensive and rapidly increasing. It is in a rich agricultural district, and must continue to enjoy rare commercial advantages. It is an important point for the wholesale trade to supply the wants of the vast lumber regions of Northern Michigan. It contains more than 100 stores, several banking houses, a commercial college, four newspapers, 17 churches, and six hotels. Among its products deserving special notice, land and calcined plaster are perhaps the most important. These substances are quarried and manufactured here in large quantities. This section contains also saline deposits. Companies have been formed, and salt has been manufactured here, but since the wonderful developments in the Saginaw Valley, attention has been diverted to that point. Unlike some other cities of Michigan, Grand Rapids has not been the favored location of benevolent or other State institutions, or great institutions of learning, but has depended wholly upon its own internal energy, enterprise and capital for success, and with these alone it has won its way to the second rank, being next to Detroit in population and trade. Its educational advantages are an excellent system of public schools, a commercial college, several literary and scientific societies, and an enlightened press.

Grand Rapids was a Baptist and Catholic mission in 1824, a French trading post in 1826, a little village in 1833, an incorporated village in 1837, and a city in 1850.

GREENVILLE.

Is a beautiful village of 1,200 inhabitants, in the township of Eureka, and county of Montcalm, 22 miles from Ionia, and 33 miles from Grand Rapids, and is the largest place between those points, north of the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad, for 75 miles. Within the circuit of many miles, no other locality posesses so many natural advantages favorable to the building up of a town. It is situated on Flat River, a meandering stream that, with its tributaries above Greenville, runs through a vast area of valuable pine forest. On these streams several saw mills are running, and wealthy companies are doing heavy lumber jobs—one man alone will cut and market 15,000,000 feet during the present winter. For this immense business, Greenville is the base of supplies.

Flat River propels, within the immediate boundaries of Greenville, the machinery of two flouring mills, two saw mills, two shingle mills, two foundries, two machine shops, two planing mills, two turning shops, one sash and blind factory, one tannery, and one woolen mill.

One steam saw mill, and one steam shingle mill are in operation, and other steam shingle mills are in process of construction.

Besides its superior lumbering and manufacturing facilities, Greenville is surrounded with rich and well watered farming lands—of oak plains cheaply cleared, easily tilled and yielding abundantly of every crop peculiar to the climate of Michigan.

Greenville has three tasteful and commodious churches—Methodist, Congregational and Baptist—two hotels, one printing office, issuing a weekly newspaper, an express office, a banking office, nine general stores, three groceries, one book store, two drug stores, three boot and shoe stores, three tin and stove stores, one bakery and confectionery, two harness shops, three carriage and wagon manufactories, one cabinet shop and furniture store, one dealer in jewelry, clocks, etc.; one clothing store, four millinery establishments, two merchant tailors, and of lawyers, physicians, mechanics and laborers, a goodly number—of the latter two classes the supply is not equal to the demand.

Greenville is on the line of the proposed extension of the Lansing and Ionia Railroad to Muskegon. The preliminary steps have already been taken to making a survey. Its rapidly increasing business demands a railroad, and its enterprising citizens will push the work to an early completion.

HILLSDALE.

A township of Hillsdale county, on the Michigan Southern Railroad, 177 miles east of Chicago. It contains some of the most productive farming lands in the State and is nearly all under cultivation. It contains the incorporated village of Hillsdale. Population, exclusive of village, about 1,000.

TOWNSHIP OFFICERS.

Supervisor—William R. Montgomery.
Clerk—Eugene Rowlson.
Treasurer—Milton H. Saviers.

HILLSDALE.

An important and flourishing village of Hillsdale county, in the township of the same name, situated on the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad, 112 miles south-west of Detroit, and 177 east of Chicago. The Michigan Southern Railroad was completed to Hillsdale in 1843, and from the impetus imparted by this great enterprise, the village improved rapidly. In 1847 an act of incorporation was obtained, and since that time the village of Hillsdale has ranked as one of the most important and flourishing in the State. The place is finely situated on rising ground, and the scenery in and about the village is of great beauty, embracing an extensive view of a rich, rolling country in the highest state of cultivation. An extensive trade of grain, fruit and produce generally, is carried on here, and the place enjoys the name of being one of the best produce markets in Southern Michigan. It contains the county buildings, several elegant business blocks, seven churches, two weekly newspapers, a commercial college, a first-class union school, with four ward branches, two National banks, three steam flour mills, four hotels, two iron foundries and machine shops, and a large number of professions and mechanical trades. There are, also, three Masonic, two Odd Fellows, three Templars, one Temperance, one Literary, and one Agricultural society in the place.

HILLSDALE COLLEGE.

A celebrated educational institution, connected with the Free Will Baptist Church, is also located here. The college edifice is of brick, four stories high, besides the basement, embracing upward of 20 public rooms, and 110 private rooms, sufficient for accommodating 220 students. The building also affords boarding accommodations for an equal number. There are, in addition, ample accommodations in private families in the vicinity of the college for several hundred more. The price of board and tuition is exceedingly moderate, while the system of education is thorough and complete. The number of students for the year past is 609. On another page we present a beautiful and accurate view of the college building, looking north. The situation of this institution, for beauty of scenery and healthfulness of location, is unsurpassed, it being on an eminence in the northerly part of the village, and having an unobstructed view for miles in every direction.

JACKSON.

The city of Jackson, the capital of Jackson county, is pleasantly situated on both sides of the Grand river, on the line of the Michigan Central Railroad, and at the terminus of the Jackson branch of the Michigan Southern, the Grand River Valley and Jackson, Lansing and Saginaw Railroads, 76 miles west of Detroit, 36 miles from Lansing, 47 from Adrian, and 208 from Chicago. It ranks as the fourth city in Michigan in the order of population, containing at present about 9,000 inhabitants, and is steadily increasing.

The city commands an active trade from the rich agricultural community by which it is surrounded, and has numerous manufacturing establishments, consisting of foundries and machine shops, flouring mills, tanneries, etc.

It has eight churches, two union schools, one daily and three weekly newspapers, four banking houses, an agricultural society, a Masonic lodge, chapter and commandery, two Odd Fellows' societies, an insurance company, four coal mining companies, four wholesale drug and three wholesale grocery stores, three extensive boot and shoe manufactories, a number of manufactories of furniture, wagons, carriages and agricultural implements, fifteen dry goods and clothing stores, several first-class hotels, and a large number of elegant business blocks and private residences.

THE MICHIGAN STATE PRISON.

Is located on Broad street, near the northern limits of the city. It is composed of a main building of brick, 60 feet front, 50 feet broad, and three stories high, containing offices, etc., with two wings of stone, each 220 feet in length, by 57 in width and 44 in height. The prison wings contain 640 cells. In the rear of the east wing is the solitary prison, containing 24 cells, in which are confined the life convicts. In the rear of the west wing is the prison for females, containing 20 cells and having at the present time 24 convicts. The work shops, forming three sides of a square, are inclosed by a wall 22 feet high, there being about six acres within the prison yard. The hospital is in the third story of the centre building, and has accommodations for 50 patients. A chapel 76 by 67 feet, in which service is regularly held twice each Sabbath, is also attached to the prison, and is open alike to the convicts and visitors. Two artesian wells supply the institution with water, each flowing at the rate of 30 barrels per hour.

The present number of convicts (November 30, 1866), is 609, of which number 330 are employed by contract in the manufacture of wagons, agricultural implements, furniture, boots and shoes and cigars.

KALAMAZOO.

This beautiful village is built on a delightful prairie on the west bank of Kalamazoo River. It is situated on the Michigan Central Railroad, about midway between Detroit and Chicago. Although it contains a population of 9,000 it has as yet no city charter. It contains 12 churches, a college, two female seminaries, a fine union school with several branches, the State Lunatic Asylum, several public halls, three weekly newspapers, and numerous stores and manafactories. This place is inhabited by a refined and cultivated people, as its beautifully laid out streets, its numerous elegant private residences, its schools and literary societies, and other educational facilities abundantly attest. The surrounding country is mostly fine prairie land, with a rich and very productive soil, under a good state of cultivation, which makes Kalamazoo an important point for the purchase of grain and vegetables, and live stock of all kinds. Much attention has been given to the improvement of the breed of horses, and a flourishing society is organized and now in operation for that purpose. Kalamazoo was first settled in 1829, and organized under the name of "Bronson." The name of the township was first called "Arcadia." But in 1836 it was incorporated as a village under the name of Kalamazoo, and became the county seat of Kalamazoo county, and the name of the township was also changed, so that the village, township, county and river now all bear the beautiful Indian name given by the aboriginal inhabitants. The Michigan Asylum for the Insane is a beautiful structure, situated on an irregular eminence one mile south of the village, overlooking the surrounding country. The location is healthy and in every respect desirable for the successful treatment of mental disease. The institution has connected with it a farm of 167 acres. The buildings themselves cover an area of one and one-third acres, their style of architecture is the modern Italian, and combines sym metry and beauty with strength and durability. The number of inmates at present is 176.

LANSING.

The capital of the State of Michigan, is a city of Ingham county, situated very near the centre of the settled portion of the lower peninsula, in latitude 42° 43' north, and longitude 84° 29' west. This place became the capital of the State in 1847, while it was yet an unbroken wilderness, with the exception of a small log house and a saw mill, built the previous year in what is now the fourth ward. Although it has a fine water power and is pleasantly situated on Grand River, it was doubtless the chosen site of the capital on account of its central position, rather than for any natural advantages it possesses for building a town. It was covered with a heavy growth of timber, and the labor of clearing the land was immense, but it has now in less than twenty years, notwithstanding all these disadvantages, become a flourishing city of nearly 5,000 inhabitants, and the centre of a rich and thriving agricultural district. It is composed of three villages, called the upper, middle, and lower towns. The city was incorporated in 1859. The State House is a large, plain, wooden structure, and was one of the first buildings erected in town. The State Library, containing 21,433 volumes, is open to the public. It contains several interesting relics and curiosities of antiquity. Among others, a copy of Livy in Latin, printed in German text, 352 years old. Also, a work entitled the Laws of Nemo, containing a code of laws that governed 300,000,000 of the human race for a thousand years without alteration or amendment, translated from the Burmese. Also contains a Latin bible 250 years old, and an original portrait of the Marquis de La-Fayette, by Horace Vernet. The State Library has the best collection of law books in the State, and among the best in the country, on the whole, is an institution that Michigan may well be proud of.

The State Reform School, for the reformation of juvenile offenders, is a fine brick edifice, four stories high, and 238 feet long.

The State Agricultural College, though a little out of the city, may be regarded as one of the public buildings of the place. The object of this institution is to give its students a thorough theoretical and practical knowledge of agriculture. It contains an agricultural library, a museum of ancient agricultural implements, a chemical and philosophical laboratory, an extensive herbarium, a botanical garden, &c., &c. It confers the degrees of bachelor of science, and master of science upon its students.

The Michigan Female College is also a notable institution of the place. The city contains also eleven churches, five hotels, several mills and manufactories, and the usual stores and mechanics' shops.

Coal of an excellent quality is found in the vicinity, also deposits of fire clay and kidney iron.

LAPEER.

A flourishing incorporated village and seat of justice of Lapeer county, 63 miles north of Detroit, and connected by daily lines of stages with Pontiac and Flint. Lapeer contains a population of about 1,200, and is the market for a large farming and lumber district. Farmer's Creek and Lapeer Creek here unite and form the Flint River, furnishing an excellent water power, which has been considerably improved. The village contains, besides the county buildings and many fine private residences, churches of the Presbyterian, Methodist, Episcopal, Baptist, Catholic and Adventist denominations, a large union school (500 scholars), a Masonic lodge, a lodge of Odd Fellows, one of Good Templars, an agricultural society, a newspaper, the weekly Clarion, published by Tomlinson & Moon, at $1.50 per year, an iron foundry and machine shop, a woolen factory, two sash and blind factories, planing mill, flour mills, saw mill, cabinet and wagon shops, two hotels and about 25 stores. It has an express office and receives a daily mail. Merchants ship goods to Flint, by Detroit & Milwaukee and Flint & Holly Railroads.

MENOMINEE.

The county seat of Menominee county is situated at the mouth of a river of the same name. It contains extensive mills for the manufacture of lumber. It has also quite a fishing interest. The business of the "Pound Net" white fishing establishment is said to amount to over $40,000 per annum. This place is also prolific in marble and other minerals. The Menominee Marble Company are now working a quarry which is said to be very valuable; some samples of it are said to be equal to the best Italian, and all equal to the best Vermont marble. This section contains extensive forests of pine and hard maple. The Menominee river forms a portion of the boundary line between Michigan and Wisconsin, and empties into Green Bay. It is a somewhat rapid stream, and furnishes a large amount of water power. The place is growing rapidly. New and extensive mills are being built. Steamers plying between Green Bay City and Escanaba, touch regularly at Menominee. Population, 800. Postmaster—Samuel W Abbott.

MONROE.

A township and an incorporated city, in a county of the same name. The city is pleasantly situated on the Toledo & Detroit Railroad, two miles inland from the western extremity of Lake Erie. A settlement was made at this place as long ago as 1776, by the French. In 1814 it was partially burned by the British under Gen. Proctor. It was a small village until 1836, since which time it has progressed steadily and has now attained to a population of nearly 5,000. The foreign population—mainly French—has always largely predominated. It is a city of much wealth, culture and refinement. It has a ship canal to the lake 100 feet wide and 12 feet deep. The river Raisin furnishes an immense and valuable water power here, which has been very well improved. The Monroe City Mills are among the best flouring mills in the State.

Among the institutions of the city that deserve notice, are a well organized fire department, eight churches, two lodges and a chapter of F. and A. M., a lodge of I. O. of O. F., several excellent schools, two weekly newspapers (the Monroe Commercial and the Monroe Monitor), two commodious public halls, and two fine hotels.

The city of Monroe is 41 miles from Detroit, 24 miles from Toledo, 33 miles from Adrian, and 243 miles from Chicago. Postmaster—Edwin Willetts.

MUSKEGON.

The capital of a county of the same name, is an incorporated post village of much importance. It is situated on Muskegon river, at the head of Muskegon lake, five miles from Lake Michigan, and 15 miles north of Grand Haven, the terminus of the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad. The lumber interest of this place is immense. Its facilities for conducting a lumber trade are absolutely unrivalled in the country, perhaps in the world. It contains twenty-five large steam saw mills, manufacturing annually 160,000,000 feet of lumber. The Muskegon river and its tributaries, ramifying a vast and heavily timbered region, will for many years to come supply it with raw material.

The following clipped from the Muskegon News, of September 19, 1866, will indicate the capacity of some of the mills:

DEALERS IN TRUNKS, &C., 211 JEFF. AVE., DETROIT. (See Page 60.)

Muskegon, Mich., is a flourishing village, situated on a lake of the same name, of about six miles in length by two in width. It numbers upwards of 5,000 inabitants, and the population is rapidly increasing. It has twenty-five steam saw mills, manufacturing upwards of 160,000,000 feet (board measure) of lumber annually. The mills range in capacity from five to fifteen millions feet of lumber per season. During the past year there have been several large mills erected, the finest of which is that of Messrs. L. G. Mason & Co., C. S. Davis, of Chicago, formerly engaged in the grocery business in Boston, being one of the partners. The mill is 45x136 feet, built on stone foundation, with a brick boiler house and fire room 28x45 feet. Its machinery, viz: three gangs, one large circular, two gang edgers, three lath mills, and numerous smaller saws, is driven by one of the finest engines in the country, 24x32 inch cylinder, with steam from six boilers 20 feet long and 42 inches in diameter. This mill is capable of sawing 16,000,000 feet (board measure) of lumber per season, and did cut during the month of August, 2,230,681 feet, running days only, 11¼ hours each day. There are employed in and about the mill 53 hands, six of whom are teamsters.

We clip the above from the Boston Commercial Bulletin, of the 1st inst. We are always pleased to devote a portion of our space to any notice we may find in reliable journals like the above, bringing our thriving town and its manufacturing interests before the people. The writer could not not have selected and brought to notice a finer mill or one whose whole business is better and more successfully managed, than the above. This mill cut, on Friday, the 31st day of August, in the short space of 11¼ hours, 131,218 feet of lumber.

Muskegon was incorporated as a village in 1861, and now contains about 5,000 inhabitants. It is one of the most thriving towns in the State, and bids fair to become one of our principal cities. It is connected with Chicago by a daily line of steamers, and with Detroit by stage to Ferrysburg, or by steamboat to Grand Haven, thence by railroad. A daily mail is received. The trade of this region is principally with Milwaukee and Chicago, from which goods are shipped direct. Distance from Detroit, 194 miles, from Chicago, 106 miles. Postmaster—William W. Owen.

NEWTON.

A township and post office in Calhoun county, 10 miles from Marshall, 116 miles west from Detroit, and five miles from Ceresco, on the Michigan Central Railroad, containing 900 inhabitants.

NILES.

An incorporated city of Berrien county, on the Michigan Central Railroad, at the junction of the Dowagiac with the St. Joseph river, 50 miles from the mouth of the latter. This river is navigable for 10 miles above Niles, thus giving the city the advantage of both steamboat and railroad communication.

This place was first known as a French trading post, as long ago as 1820. It was afterward an Indian mission, known as "Carey Mission." It was incorporated as a village in 1834, and as a city in 1859. It has improved rapidly since the completion of the Michigan Central Railroad to this point in 1848. It has now a population of 5,000 or upwards, and contains seven churches, an excellent and costly union school house, with accommodations for 1,000 pupils, five flouring mills, two private banking houses, two weekly newspapers, two lodges and a chapter of Masons, a lodge of Odd Fellows, two Temples of Honor, a literary society and library, an agricultural society, about fifty stores, and many professional and mechanical trades. On Main street are several blocks of beautiful Athens marble, and many private residences of rare taste and excellence. Postmaster—William J. Edwards.

PONTIAC.

Is the county seat of Oakland county. It is situated on the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad, 26 miles from Detroit. It is an incorporated city, built on both sides of Clinton river. It bears the name of a noted Indian chief, who made the site of the present city his camping ground for many years. The history of civilization in Pontiac dates back nearly half a century, its settlement by white people having been commenced in 1818, 19 years before the admission of Michigan as a State into the Union. Pontiac is an enterprising town, and presents many substantial evidences of prosperity. It is the best wool market in the State, and is also a very good grain market. It contains a woolen factory, four flouring mills, four saw mills, between 40 and 50 stores and groceries, two weekly newspapers, (the Pontiac Weekly Gazette, and the Pontiac Jacksonian,) two machine shops, two breweries, six hotels, eight churches, an excellent union school, and a well appointed fire department, besides many factories, mills and mechanic shops. SAGINAW CITY

Is the county seat of Saginaw county, situated 18 miles from the mouth of Saginaw river, on the west side, and two miles above East Saginaw. It is 100 miles north northwest from Detroit by rail, and 300 miles by water, having communication by a semi-weekly line of steamers. It is also connected with Bay City by a semi-daily line of steamers, and with East Saginaw by street railroad. Although not as large as its rival neighbor, East Saginaw, it is much more pleasantly situated, being located on a high and healthy plateau, commanding a fine view of the surrounding country, and especially of the river and valley. It is regularly and handsomely laid out, and extends along the river for two miles. Many of the residences are fine, and the county buildings are among the finest in the State. A public square occupies the central part of the city, upon which stand the court-house and the county offices. On each side of this square stands a beautiful church, and beside these the Union School House and County Jail. Saginaw City was made a military post in 1820, and was a trading post of the American Fur Company for many years. It began to be a village about 1830. Its present population is about 5,500. It contains six hotels, seven churches, two banking houses, about fifty stores, two Masonic lodges, and a lodge each of Odd Fellows and Good Templars. Its staple manufactures are lumber and salt, having eight extensive manufactories for each of these articles. It contains also establishments for the manufacture of flour, shingles, sash, doors, blinds, staves, heading, steam boilers and engines, guns and rifles, cabinet ware, tinware, carriages, cigars, etc.

Railroad communication with Saginaw City is now only made via East Saginaw on the Flint and Pere Marquette Railroad, but it is expected that the road connecting Saginaw City with the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad at Owosso will be completed this season.

SAULT DE STE. MARIE.

A township and village of Chippewa county, on St. Mary's straits, at the "Sault," or rapids, from which it takes its name. It has a post office, and is the seat of justice for Chippewa county. It is situated 365 miles north-west from Detroit. It is elevated and pleasantly situated, and was formerly the site of an ancient French fort and missionary station. The St. Mary's canal, which is 100 feet wide at the top of the water and 12 feet deep, is constructed around the falls at this place. The two locks are the largest in the world. Fish of various kinds, especially white fish, are caught here in great numbers, and of the best quality. During the summer season, the village is a favorite place of resort of pleasure seekers from all parts of the country.

ST. JOSEPH.

Is a beautiful village of 2,200 inhabitants, situated on Lake Michigan, at the mouth of St. Joseph River. It has one of the best harbors on the lake, and its trade employs a daily line of first-class steamers to Chicago. A line of steamers also ply on the river between this place and Niles, a distance of 50 miles by the river. It is an excellent farming country round about St. Joseph, and especially adapted to fruit growing.

The village is incorporated, and contains five churches, nine general stores, six groceries, three hotels, one Masonic lodge, two weekly newspapers, the St. Joseph Traveler and the St. Joseph Herald, besides the various professions and mechanical trades. A substantial bridge spans the river, which cost $15,000. Daily mail. Postmaster—Fitz H. Stevens.

TAWAS CITY.

Is a new town, situated on Tawas Bay, near the entrance on the northern shore of Saginaw Bay. It is one of the best harbors on Lake Huron, having a capacity to accommodate an immense amount of shipping, and being land-locked, it effectually protects vessels from the storms of the lake. It is so secure a harbor, that saw mills are built on the shore of the bay, and millions of feet of logs are annually rafted from the Au Gres and Au Sable rivers, and boomed at the mills in the open bay. Tawas Bay is the entrepot for the large supplies required by the immense lumbering interest on the Au Gres and Rifle rivers, and has recently been made a port of entry for the district between Bay City and Alpena. Tawas City is the county seat of Iosco county. In the rear of the town are the immense prairies of the Au Gres and Rifle rivers. The western part of Iosco county is heavily timbered. This section is being rapidly settled. Many mills are being built, and schools established. Two miles from Tawas City on the shore of the Bay is another village called East Tawas, where are located also extensive steam saw, shingle and grist-mills. Tawas City is 50 miles from Bay City, with which place it is connected by steamers in the summer time, and in winter by a semi-weekly line of mail stages. Pop-

THREE RIVERS.

A flourishing incorporated post village of St. Joseph county, in the township of Lockport, at the confluence of the Portage Rocky and St. Joseph Rivers, on the White Pigeon and Kalamazoo Railroad, 12 miles north of the former and 28 miles south of the latter place, and seven miles distant from Centreville, the county seat. The first settlement was made here in 1830, by Jacob McEntinfer, who emigrated from Ohio. He was soon followed by Marshall Beadle, John H. Bowman, Berdan Hicks and Joseph B. Millard, who are all settled in the immediate vicinity. The first church (Methodist Episcopal) was erected in 1838. The village plat was made in 1836, and incorporated as a village in 1857. The place consists of Three Rivers, proper, and the suburban villages of Canada, or Jersey City, Lockport and Brooklyn. Near the latter place is the beautiful cemetery, Riverside, which is tastefully laid out and delightfully situated, on the north bank of the St. Joseph River. The place is supplied with an immense water power, which is but partially improved. It contains several large flouring mills, foundries and machine shops, a large paper mill, turning factory, carriage manufactories, etc., one weekly newspaper, The Three Rivers Reporter, one National and one private banking house, one lodge, council and chapter of F. & A. M., one lodge of Odd Fellows, one Baptist, one Presbyterian, one Episcopal and one Methodist Episcopal church. The past season the Baptist and Methodist Episcopal societies have completed new and splendid edifices—the latter at a cost of about $20,000. The streets are well laid out and handsomly bordered with shade trees, and the whole town has an inviting air of thrift and prosperity. It contains about 30 stores, and is regarded as one of the best grain markets in Southern Michigan. It is also a great mart for hogs, live stock and produce of all kinds. Population, about 2,500. It has a daily mail.

YPSILANTI.

Ypsilanti is beautifully situated in the eastern part of Washtenaw county, on both sides of Huron River, and on the Michigan Central Railroad, 30 miles west of Detroit, and 254 miles from Chicago. The city is composed of two business centres, or villages, one at the railroad depot, and the other about half a mile distant, on the other side of the river. The city charter was obtained in 1858. There are located here two of the best conducted and most tastefully arranged educational institutions in the country—the State Normal School and the model Union School of the State. The Ypsilanti Union School, erected in 1857, at a cost of $45,000, is one of the finest buildings of the kind in the State. There are also two fine branch schools. The total value the school property of the city is about $86,000. Ypsilanti has the credit of constructing the first Union School of the State, which was organized in 1848. The State Agricultural Society's and Normal School Museum is located here. The value of the museum and building is $12,000. The city contains six churches (representing the Presbyterian, Baptist, Methodist, Lutheran, Catholic and Episcopal denominationations), two flouring mills, an extensive paper mill, three iron foundries and machine shops, three sash and blind factories, a large barrel and stave factory, one helve and spoke factory, one steam cabinet factory, two tanneries, seven hotels, two weekly newspapers, one National Bank and two private banking houses, about 60 stores, and a large number of professions and mechanical trades, also a large woolen factory, grist mill, saw mill, plaster mill and planing mill, owned by the Ypsilanti Woolen Maufacturing Company, The country around is highly productive, healthy, and settled by an enterprising class of farmers. The town has a large and increasing trade, and is an important depot for grain, wool fruit and produce. There are two lodges, a chapter and council of Masons, a lodge of Good Templars, an agricultural society and a Young Men's Literary Association, The present population of the city is about 5,000. Postmaster—D. ADVERTISING.

"He who does not advertise his business, advertises that he has nothing to advertise."

Advertise in the People's Paper!
Advertise where it will be seen!
Advertise where it will be Read!

ADVERTISE IN THE DETROIT DAILY UNION

FOR THE FOLLOWING REASONS:

FIRST. The UNION has a circulation in the city, by carrier boys, double that of any other paper.

SECOND. The UNION goes principally among the industrial classes, who are not reached by any other paper.

THIRD. The UNION is not the organ of any particular political party, consequently not partizan in its character, and is read by all classes.

FOURTH. The UNION, from its fearless and independent spirit, and its zealous defense of the People's Rights, is acknowledged by all to be the most popular paper in the city.

FIFTH. The UNION contains only a limited number of advertisements, which are tastefully displayed, and readily meet the eye.

SIXTH. The advertising rates are less than any other city daily—a fact which certainly should not be overlooked.

☞ Specimen Copies sent to any part of the Country.

RATES OF ADVERTISING LOW.

☞ ALL KINDS OF JOB PRINTING, AT LOWEST RATES.

THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.

OF NEW YORK.

FREDERICK S. WINSTON, President.

Cash Assets, February 1, 1867, over $19,000,000
Annual Cash Income, over 6,000,000

Life and Endowment Policies Issued on the most Favorable Terms.

This is the largest Life Company in the United States. Its assets, over Nineteen Millions of Dollars, are more than double the cash assets of any other, and do not include any premium notes, fancy stocks, or other imaginary or questionable securities.

DIVIDENDS ARE DECLARED ANNUALLY

AND ARE PAID AT ONCE.

The first dividend is declared on a policy at the end of the first year, and may be used in reducing the second premium. Most other Companies keep their dividends for four or more years.

THIS IS THE SAFEST, BEST AND CHEAPEST COMPANY

FOR THE POLICY HOLDER.

It has the largest Assets and declares the largest Dividends. All policies are non-forfeitable, as the Company will always give a surrender value in cash, if applied for within a reasonable time.

THE SHORTEST LINE BETWEEN CINCINNATI & A LAKE OUTLET

And makes a direct route from Cincinnati to Detroit, by way of the Detroit, Monroe and Toledo Road, which is a branch of the Mich. Southern. It connects also with the Cleveland & Toledo Road, forming a through route from the East, and with the Toledo & Wabash Valley Road for points in the West and South-West.

At the CROSSING OF THE LOUISVILLE, NEW ALBANY AND CHICAGO ROAD, it connects with trains for the interior and Southern parts of Indiana; at Chicago it connects with all the Roads for the Far West and North-West; at Detroit with the Grand Trunk and Great Western Railways, Eastward, and the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad, Westward.

The different branches of this road are as follows: AIR LINE—Elkhart (where it intersects Main Line to Toledo. DETROIT, MONROE AND TOLEDO LINE—Toledo to Detroit. MONROE BRANCH—Adrian (where it joins the Main Line) to Monroe, where it connects with the Detroit and Toledo Road. JACKSON BRANCH—Adrian to Jackson, where it makes connection with the Michigan Central Railroad.

THE PASSENGER DEPARTMENT

Is unsurpassed in its arrangements for the comfort and convenience of Travelers. Day Express Trains are fitted with SALISBURY'S PATENT DUSTERS, and Cars with RAISED VENTILATED ROOFS, whereby a pure air is at all times secured. Night Trains are provided with PALACE SLEEPING CARS, with all the latest improvements, and which are in fact, as well as in name, Cars in which a good night's rest may be taken. TRAINS RUN THROUGH FROM DETROIT TO CHICAGO WITHOUT CHANGE, and the above described Sleeping Cars accompany Night Trains on the route.

THE FREIGHT DEPARTMENT

Is amply supplied with Rolling Stock and Motive Power, and especial attention is given to the Transportation of Live Stock, while Freight Trains furnish Shippers with prompt and speedy dispatch. In short, THE MICHIGAN SOUTHERN is THE LINE, THE OLD RELIABLE.

THE FLORENCE

SEWING MACHINE COMPANY

Offer their celebrated Reversible Feed, Knot and Lock Stitch

SEWING MACHINES

To the public as being the MOST PERFECT, and adapted to more different kinds of work than any other Sewing Machine now in use.

Years have been spent in their perfection, as the Company were determined not to put their Machines on the market until they could sustain the assertion which they now make, that

THEY ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD

And the only one capable of making more than one kind of Stitch. A careful examination will show that this is indisputable.

Some of the valuable features of this Machine over all others are; its reversible feed, feeding either to the right or left; its perfect reliability, never skipping stitches; and the making of four different stitches for the various kinds of work the operator may wish to do.

It is almost noiseless—runs very fast, and the change of the feed, and for the different stitches, is made while the Machine is in motion.

It makes the Lock Stitch, which has been considered heretofore, by an almost universal verdict, as the only reliable one made. We add to that the Double Lock, which makes it doubly sure; the half and full Knot Stitches, being a perfect knot to every stitch, which is more durable than can be made by any other machine, or by hand, and in all cases leaving the stitches on both sides of the work alike. The Hemmer, the most practical in use, turns wide and narrow Hems, and will Fell beautifully.
